Poetry.

IF WE KNEW.

If we knew the cares and crosses

Crowding round our neighbor's way;

If we knew the little losses

Sorely grievous every day—

Would we then so often chide him

For the lack of thrift and gain,

Leaving on his heart a shadow,

Leaving on his heart a stain?

If we knew the clouds above us,

Held by gentle blessings there,

Would we turn away all troubling

In our blind and weak desire?

Would we shrink from little shadows,

Lying on the dewy grass,

While 'tis only birds of Eden,

Just in merrily flying past?

If we knew the silent story,

Quivering through the heart of pain,

Would our womanhood dare doom them

Back to haunts of guilt again?

Life hath many a tangled crossing,

Joy hath many a break of woe,

And the cheeks torn with weeping—

This the blessed angels know.

Let us reach into our bosoms

For the key of other lives,

And with love's warm edifying nature,

Cherish good that still survives;

So that when our disheveled spirits

See to realms of light again,

We may say, "Dear Father Judge us

As we judged our fellow-men."

From the Atlantic Monthly, August.

Where will the Rebellion

Leave us.

"The United States are bounded,

North, by the British Possessions; South, by the Gulf of Mexico; East, by the Atlantic Ocean; and West, by the Pacific.

So the school-books told us which we studied in our childhood; and so, in every school throughout the land, the children are taught to-day. The armed hosts whose tread resounds through the Continent are marching Southward to teach this simple lesson in geography.

They all know it by heart. "This they discuss as they march." The proposition is wherever, in any benighted region, this elementary proposition shall be henceforth denied or doubted, schools for adults are to be established, and the needful instruction given. By regiments, battalions, and brigades, with all necessary apparatus, the teachers go forth to their work. The proposition is a very simple one, easily expressed and easily understood; but it tells the whole story. It is the substance of all men's speech. Mr. Lincoln states it in his inaugural, Mr. Douglass impresses it upon the Illinois Legislature. Mr. Sewall announces it, briefly and with emphasis, to the governments of Europe.

Sentimental talk about "our country," however bounded, is obsolete; and how the country is bounded is now the point to be settled, once and forever. "This territory, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, belongs to the people of the United States, as they may choose to hold and keep it. We shall neither alter our schoolbooks nor revise our maps." So say the American people, rising in their wrath.

The practical question with which Mr.

Lincoln's administration had to deal in the first place was, whether a popular government is strong enough to suppress a military rebellion? And that may be regarded as already settled. But the question upon which that rebellion has justified itself, the vital facts of the national unity, and even of national existence. As a people, we have always been extremely tolerant of theories, however absurd. There is hardly a doctrine of constitutional law so clear and well settled that it is not, from time to time, disputed and disputed again. But when it comes to reducing mischievous speculations to practice, the case is altered, and the practical genius of the people begins to manifest itself. Thus, the Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions of '98 and '99 declared the Federal Constitution to be merely a compact between sovereign States, created for a special and limited purpose; and that each party
